Today, most people agree that Subconscious urges motivate and influence a person's behavior in all aspects of daily activity. The Subconscious represents the major portion of mental activity and is generally accepted as having more impact on the way people think and interact with others than do conscious thought processes. PsychoGraphology opens the door to the mystery of the Subconscious by identifying those personality traits and urges that remain dormant but influence the decision making process.

PsychoGraphology, known as a "Projective Technique," identifies a person's true personality by utilizing both mechanical and intuitive methods for assessment purposes. It can also be used to tap into an individual's stream of awareness and explore those experiences that are described as the "womb to tomb" phenomenon of past, present and future experiences.

Robert McKnight combines an educational and personal history of PsychoGraphology that expands over 40 years. His background includes teachings in Psychology, Philosophy, Religion, and Parapsychological methods. Mr. McKnight is available for individual, group, or business consultations by appointment only.
